Mason has improved since our last session but still has opportunity with personalization.		new evaluation and coaching session in 2 weeks
Today we chatted through the opportunity to put yourself in the customer's shoes and really relate to what they are conveying. Using language that not only allows the customer to know you are listening, but that you are attempting to relate to their experience. When a customer verbalizes a complaint, it's our responsibility to listen, acknowledge, show you care, and then resolve their issue.		I would like to see the defect rate for Conveys interest drop by 10 points by the end of January (8 weeks). Scheduling follow-up for this conversation to check in 4 weeks from today.
Mason has an opportunity to focus more on what the customer is stating to avoid repeating information. It causes the customer frustration.	Great job navigating a difficult process complaint. You maintained professionalism and aligned with the company's process (didn't throw the brand under the bus).	I expect 5% improvement in Builds Rapport.
Pay attention to the customer, don't play in your email.	Good job navigating the systems.	Expected improvement by 2/24/2020...
Mason, you need to show up to work!		Show up to work
Moving forward Mason will try to build rapport with customer's during the service portion of his dialogue by engaging the customer within the dialogue more. Also, when discussing the website, it's important to appropriately advise of the portal login requirements, specifically the password requirements.	Great job on sounding natural even through there is a script within the various elements. It really sounds as though the dialogue is created for that customer versus scripted.	We will chat in a few weeks regarding the rapport behavior modification we are expecting to see. Scheduling for March 24th.
		Achieve a 10% improvement by next week.
